

Process and target for calibration of digital input devices

Summary

The invention is about a process to calibrate digital input devices, especially scanners and digital cameras. An input device reads a calibration picture and an adjustment of color values is made. This is defined through the usage of a calibration picture that shows only normed, printable colors. The invention is also about a calibration target.